

I urge the FCC to change their existing RF standards which are outdated and do not take into account biological effects that occur at non-thermal levels.

Please consider the standards set in other countries, which are stricter and intended to protect the public's health. I am especially concerned for our children and people in their child-bearing years.

Our children deserve to be protected from harmful exposure to electromagnetic radiation. Please revise the standards for their sake!

Sincerely,

Rachel Nummer